INTRODUCTION TO COMMUNITY TRANSPORTATION

Community transportation services can meet a wide range of needs for persons with disabilities so they can participate fully in their community and do everyday things such as go to work, go shopping, visit friends, attend church, or go to doctor appointments. In Florida, there are many types of transportation programs for persons with disabilities and their families, and knowing what is available and which to use can be quite confusing.

This guide has been prepared to make it easier for you to find transportation programs that address your specific needs. After a brief introduction to the federal and state community transportation programs, county-by-county information is provided, including specific services available within each county, and contact information for Commuter Service Agencies, Public Transit Agencies, Disaster Planning, and the Community Transportation Coordinators who manage transportation services.

Programs that Serve Individuals with Developmental Disabilities

There are two basic types of community transportation: human services and public. Human services transportation is usually provided by human service agencies such as Tri-County Community Council, Mid-Florida Community Services, or Wakulla County Senior Citizens’ Council to provide transportation for specific needs or services. They may use their own vehicles or buy services for their clients.

Public transportation is transit that is available to the general public and often includes transportation on a fixed route or fixed time schedule. Public transportation is often provided by buses, subways, and vans. Paratransit is transportation that can be arranged by request to go to a specific place such as a doctor at a certain time.

The Florida Department of Transportation (FDOT) is responsible for all community transportation systems within the state. Two offices within the Department manage the human service and public transportation programs - the Commission for the Transportation Disadvantaged and the Public Transit Office. The Commission brings together services for each of Florida’s 67 counties and provides a Helpline, 1-800-983-2435, where someone will listen and document your concerns, provide you with information, refer you to your local community transportation coordinators, and keep a database on information from all callers. The Commission’s website at http://www.dot.state.fl.us/ctd/ provides a listing of community transportation coordinators who manage transportation services or contract with other agencies who do so in each county. When planning transportation needs, the community transportation coordinator is a good person to call first.

Most Common Services Available

Depending on each county, services usually available to you are commuter services, general public transportation, or paratransit. For example, general public transportation in Miami-Dade includes buses, commuter rail, and light rail transportation. Miami-Dade also provides paratransit services using vans and private taxicabs. Through the South Florida Commuter Services you can find carpools, vanpools, or other ways to get around the greater Miami-Dade area. Other counties may have both human service transportation and general public transportation provided by vans or small buses. Most paratransit providers request advance notice for appointments, usually at least 24 hours.

Getting Started: General Information for Getting on the Go

- Call the Helpline

  To get help planning your trip, you can call the Commission for the Transportation Disadvantaged Helpline, 1- (800) 983-2435 or visit their website at http://www.dot.state.fl.us/ctd/. The Commission also has two publications that may help you: the Customer Rights and Responsibilities, and Everything You Ever Wanted To Know About Paratransit Eligibility And Didn’t Even Know Who To Ask!

- Call Your Transportation Coordinator

  Call your local county community transportation coordinator to plan your trip. Their contact information is on the following county pages, and many can be contacted by telephone, email, or through their website. Each community transportation coordinator has a list of services available in that county, including information on private bus, van, and taxicab services that also may help you to get around. Each community transportation coordinator and the planning agencies that work with them also have meetings and use other events to give information about transportation services.

- Visit additional websites that are good resources:

  - The FDOT Public Transit Office manages public transit and intercity bus services. There are more than 25 public transit systems in Florida, and many also serve as the community transportation coordinators. http://www.dot.state.fl.us/transit/Pages/transitagenciesinflorida.htm
The FDOT Florida’s Commuter Assistance Program provides easy access to the FREE services offered by various commuter assistance programs in Florida. This may include bicycling, public transit, carpools, working from home or other remote job site, vanpools, and walking.

http://www.commuterservices.com/index.html

Make a Plan to Get to Work
If you work, it is a good rule of thumb to register with the commuter services agency in your county. In addition to helping you find carpools, vanpools, and other ways to get to work, these agencies have emergency or guaranteed ride home programs that can help you get home if you cannot use your regular ride to get home from work.

Check on Requirements
If you are able to use general public transportation services, there are no special requirements, but you must pay a fare. If you cannot use general public transportation services or need to make a “program” trip, there may be special requirements. The community transportation coordinator can help you or your family to find out how to apply for what is sometimes called door-to-door, paratransit, or specialized transportation services. In most cases, you or a family member must fill out an application and the condition that keeps you from using public transportation must be confirmed. The local community transportation coordinator can help you with this application.

Know the Costs
The costs of services or fares vary by the types of service used within each county. A trip on public transportation may cost from $0.25 to $2.50 or more for a one-way trip. The differences are due to discounts and types of trips. For example, some counties charge as little as $0.25 cash for its Neighborhood Connector Routes. Paratransit trips usually cost more, but cannot cost more than twice the fare paid for the fixed route transportation services. The paratransit service, a one-way trip for some counties, costs $3.00. Medicaid trips cost $1.00. Most transit systems take cash, but prefer exact change. Always check with the transportation provider. If your trip is sponsored by a program, the fare may be paid for you.

Partner with Private Companies
If your human service or public transportation agency cannot serve your needs, some private companies also work with transportation agencies to help their clients schedule rides. Contact information for Taxicab, Limousine, and Paratransit Association (TLPA) members is provided on county pages, where available.

Getting on the Go by County
This section provides an overview of transportation available in each of Florida’s 67 counties. Each county is listed alphabetically by the county name. The overview of transportation resources in each county includes:

- Information about Community Transportation Coordinators (CTC)
- Information about fixed route and paratransit services, if available
- Information about how to plan a trip including fares and pass information
- Information on Disaster Planning

Each public transportation or paratransit agency serves a specific geographic area. After working with the CTC to find out how to get around in your county, contact the provider to plan your trip. Many public transportation agencies list information on fares on their websites. Transportation agencies also provide information by telephone, including areas served, days and hours that the services are available, routes, fares, and use of devices, such as wheelchairs or scooters. Many public transportation agencies also offer travel training to help you learn the routes. Contact information for Taxicab, Limousine, and Paratransit Association (TLPA) members has been provided, where available.

Disaster Preparedness
In addition to disaster planning and transportation information provided in this guide, the Florida Developmental Disabilities Council also has a disaster preparedness guide called Disaster Ready: Emergency Preparedness Guide for Floridians with Disabilities. You can get a copy from the Council by:

- Telephone - (850) 488-4180 or (800) 580-7801 (toll free);
- Telecommunication device for the deaf - (850) 488-0956 (TDD) or (888) 488-8633 (TDD toll free);
- Fax - (850) 922-6702
- Email - fddc@fddc.org
- Internet - http://www.fddc.org

Each county description includes a map of the county. A list of the symbols used on each map is listed on page xvi.

* Remember that telephone numbers and transportation services may change.
Let's GO!

We hope you find this transportation guidebook useful. In addition to information about transportation resources in each Florida county, there is a glossary of terms on page xiii. On page 143, there is information about how to get involved in planning transportation services in your community. There is also a list of acronyms on page xiii.

Finally, a Consumer Satisfaction Survey is provided at the end of this guide. Please give us your feedback on the usefulness of this guide.

Carpool
An arrangement where two or more people share the use and cost of private automobiles in traveling to and from a place together.

Coordinated transportation
A cooperative arrangement between transportation providers and agencies needing transportation services. Coordination models include: (1) shared information and referral, (2) shared use of staff, vehicles, facilities, training, and/or maintenance resources, (3) procurement of a common transportation provider (or set of providers) either directly or through a broker, and (4) a fully-integrated service.

Community transportation
Transportation services that meet all the transit needs of a community including general public and specific populations such as youth, seniors, persons with disabilities, and persons with low-income.

Designated recipient
Any State, political subdivision, instrumentality, public or private agency, institution, department or other organizational unit receiving financial assistance from the Federal Transit Administration.

Demand-Responsive
(See Paratransit.) The term sometimes used instead of paratransit or to mean paratransit that is not provided under the auspices of a public transit agency.

Dial-A-Ride
(See Paratransit.) This term sometimes means paratransit for the general public, in contrast to specialized paratransit for specific groups. In many communities, Dial-A-Ride is the sole form of public transportation. In others, it replaces public transit in low-demand periods or in low-demand areas and sometimes is used as feeder service to a public transit service.

Developmental disability
A severe, chronic mental or physical impairment or combination of mental and physical impairments of an individual 5 years of age or older that occurs before the person is age 22, is likely to continue, results in functional limitations in three or more of the major life activity areas and results in the need for a combination of services, supports, or other assistance that is of lifelong or an extended period of time. When applied to infants and young children, it means individuals from birth to age 5 who have substantial developmental delay or specific congenital or acquired conditions with a high chance of resulting in developmental disabilities if services are not provided.

District Office
A Florida Department of Transportation District Public Transportation Office/District Office of Modal Development/Mobility Management and/or staff.

Feeder services
A transit or paratransit service that provides transportation to and from a fixed-route bus stop or train station.

Fixed-route services
A public transportation service that is most often seen in cities using buses following a designated route according to a timetable. Passengers come to the bus stop to wait for the bus.
Intercity Bus Service
Regularly scheduled service for the general public which operates with limited stops over fixed routes connecting two or more urban areas not in close proximity, has the capacity for transporting baggage carried by passengers, and which makes connection with scheduled service to more distant points.

Local Coordinating Boards (LCB)
People selected by the Transportation Disadvantaged Planning Agency to advise the community transportation coordinator on local service needs, review the coordinated community transportation disadvantaged service plan, review coordination strategies, and perform other work to improve local services.

Medical Needs Shelter
(See also Special Needs Shelter.) A temporary emergency facility that gives care to persons whose medical condition is greater than the care given at a Red Cross Shelter, but is not severe enough to require hospital care.

Nonurbanized (or Rural) Area
All territory, population, and housing units located outside of urbanized areas and urban clusters with populations less than 50,000.

Paratransit
(Also called Demand-Responsive Service or Dial-A-Ride.) Any form of transportation used to connote non-fixed route/schedule transit and involves placing trip requests. Taxis, other for-hire vehicles, and ridesharing services such as carpooling and vanpooling may be included in the definition. The ADA requires that transit operators provide accessible paratransit service for persons with disabilities that is comparable to regular transportation services; such service is often referred to as ADA Paratransit.

Program Trip
(See Sponsored Trip.) A transportation trip paid for by a sponsoring agency or program such as Medicaid, the Transportation Disadvantaged (TD) program, or a human-service agency contract.

Public Transit or Public Transportation
Transporting people by vehicles or systems of vehicles that travel locally or regionally on land or water and are available for use by the general public. Public transit includes those forms of transportation commonly known as "paratransit," characterized by their nonscheduled, non-fixed route nature.

Ridesharing
A form of transportation where more than one person shares the use of the vehicle such as a van or car to make a trip. Also known as “buspooling”, “carpooling”, or “vanpooling.”

Route Deviation
A mix of fixed-route and demand-response service. The vehicle will leave the regular route to pick up or drop off a passenger at a requested location and will then go back to the regular route. Deviations are usually small—not more than a few blocks away from the regular route.

Special Needs Shelter
(See also Medical Needs Shelter.) A temporary emergency facility that gives care to persons whose medical condition is greater than the care given at a Red Cross Shelter, but is not severe enough to require hospital care.

Sponsored Trip
A transportation trip paid for by a sponsoring agency or program such as Medicaid, the Transportation Disadvantaged (TD) program, or a human-service agency contract.

Alachua County

MV Transit is the community transportation coordinator (CTC) for Alachua County. MV Transit can provide information on available transportation, including other transportation providers and assistance in using the public transportation or paratransit service. They can also help you apply for paratransit service. Contact MV Transit at (352) 375-2784 or toll free (800) 423-1752.

If you or a family member live in Alachua County and are able to use public transportation, you have three choices.

- The City of Alachua’s Transit System, AlachuWay CATS, provides transportation between Alachua and Gainesville, Monday through Friday. There is a morning route and an afternoon route. Contact the City of Alachua Public Services Department at (386) 418-6140 for more information. Information on AlachuWay CATS can also be found on the Internet: http://www.cityofalachua.com.

- The second public transit option is the City of Gainesville Regional Transit System (RTS). The Regional Transit System also is the commuter rideshare agency. Contact the Regional Transit System at (352) 334-2600 for help planning your trip. (All routes are wheelchair accessible. Drivers announce stops. Hours of service vary by route. Some begin as early as 6:00 a.m. and end as late as 11:30 p.m. There also is limited weekend service.) The Gainesville Metropolitan Planning Organization also provides general transportation planning.

- If you live or work in Alachua or Bradford Counties, a third option is available through free registration in the web-based carpooling program, FloridaWorks GreenRide. After registering by computer, you can look for others with similar work schedules and destinations. The person can be contacted by email to arrange travel.
Planning a Trip in Alachua County

A good way to start planning a trip is to call the Regional Transit System for help at (352) 334-2600 or (352) 334-2650. The Regional Transit System also may be able to help you find transportation to work, especially if you work days or times that do not fit the fixed route schedule.

If you cannot use the fixed route system, call MV Transit at least one day before you want to travel at (352) 375-2784. (Allow more time if you are not already ADA certified for paratransit travel).

The Regional Transit System provides a listing of several points of interest on its website, RTS Points of Interest, at http://www.go-rts.com/interest.html.

This includes:
- The Social Security Administration
- Gainesville City Hall
- Forest Park
- City College
- Gainesville Mall
- Royal Park Cinemas and
- Other points of interest

From the Regional Transit System Points of Interest Internet website, the Regional Transit System provides links to routes and maps. If you do not have a computer, you can call the Regional Transit System at (352) 334-2650 to get help. Most Regional Transit System buses have bicycle racks on the front that hold up to two bicycles. To use the bike rack, signal the driver that you are going to the front of the bus. You must load and unload your bike.

RTS Fare & Pass Information

The Regional Transit System requires exact fares because drivers do not carry change. You can also buy passes from the bus driver, the Santa Fe Community College Main Campus Bookstore, or the RTS Downtown Station. Please contact the Regional Transit System at (352) 334-2650 for the current fares.

ADA Paratransit Service

The Regional Transit System also offers door-to-door paratransit service in lift-equipped vehicles for those ADA paratransit certified riders who are unable to use the fixed-route service. A service request must be made the day before the trip by calling MV Transportation at (352) 375-2784 for certification information and to set up a travel reservation. Medicaid fares are $1.00 per one-way trip.

If you work, don’t forget to register with the commuter services program!

Counts By County Transportation Information and Services for Persons with Developmental Disabilities and Their Families

How to Get Involved in Transportation Planning in Your Community

Transportation services in Florida depend on everyone helping in the planning process. You and your family can get involved in several ways.

The Florida Commission for the Transportation Disadvantaged (CTD) has put together a set of rights and responsibilities. You can download these at http://www.dot.state.fl.us/ctd/. Or, call the Commission’s helpline at (800) 983-2435 to have the Customer Rights and Responsibilities mailed to you.

In summary, the rights and responsibilities include safety, courtesy, complaints, and service issues. You have the right to expect that the community transportation coordinators and transportation providers look out for your safety, will treat you with courtesy, accept valid complaints, and provide reliable service. Your responsibilities include following safety regulations, being courteous to the coordinator and transportation provider, make valid complaints, and be ready at the scheduled time for your trip.

The Commission Helpline, (800) 983-2435, was created to provide customers with a way to voice concerns about the coordinated transportation system and also to provide information about the Transportation Disadvantaged program. Commission Helpline staff take calls, listen and document concerns, provide callers with information, refer callers to the appropriate local area, and maintain a database on information from all callers.

All calls that concern local Transportation Disadvantaged services are referred to the local staff for follow-up. However, the Commission Helpline staff will follow-up with the customers to ensure their concern has been addressed.

In addition, the Commission Helpline staff assist callers in resolving concerns by acting as an advocate or mediator on the caller’s behalf.

Local Coordinating Boards (LCBs)

Each county has a local coordinating board (LCB) that gives advice to the community transportation coordinator. The local coordinating boards meet at least every three months. Contact your local community transportation coordinator to find out the meeting schedules. Attend the meetings. The local coordinating board wants to know your needs to help plan the services in your area. By working with the local coordinating board, you can help make the transportation services better for everyone in your community.

If you are a family member would like to be a member of the local coordinating board, contact the planning agency for your county. The planning agencies and their contact information are shown by county below.

PUBLIC TRANSIT AGENCY PLANNING

In addition to the local coordinating board (LCB), public transportation agencies have public meetings to help them plan services. Contact your local public transit agency to get information on these meetings and attend them to let them know what you need.

METROPOLITAN PLANNING ORGANIZATION CITIZENS ADVISORY COMMITTEES

Metropolitan Planning Organizations also have citizen advisory committees that are separate from the local coordinating board (LCBs). You and your family can work with these committees to ensure that connections between transportation services are available. For example, you can advise the citizen advisory committee regarding bus stops, shelters, sidewalks, and other things that might seem small but are important to help you to use public transportation. This information is shared throughout the agency to make transportation easier for everyone.

LOCAL UNITED WE RIDE COORDINATION ACTIVITIES

Every county in Florida is concerned about making sure that the human service and public transportation sectors/departments work together to improve travel for everyone. There are many coordination effort opportunities available in every community beyond the ways identified in this section. Look for announcements about “United We Ride” in your community. Beyond getting on the go, get involved! We need to hear what you need.

SAFE ROUTES TO SCHOOL (SRTS)

Community leaders, parents, and schools across the U.S. are using Safe Routes to School programs to encourage and help more children to walk and bike to school safely. The National Center for Safe Routes to School helps communities to develop successful Safe Routes programs and strategies. The Center hosts a centralized information resource on how to start and sustain a Safe Routes to School program, and it also provides case studies of successful programs as well as many other resources for training and technical assistance. There are many Safe Routes to School programs in Florida. See the national SRTS website, http://www.saferoutesinfo.org, to find out how you and your family can get involved in your community.

Let’s go!
HOW HUMAN SERVICE AND PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION WORK

The National Consortium on Coordination of Human Services Transportation, an alliance of national non-profit organizations and associations, works to improve transportation choices and better coordination of human services and local public transportation systems. There is also federal and state legislation which supports the coordination of human services and public transportation programs. An overview follows.

Providing affordable, accessible and safe transportation for human services transportation has been researched and promoted since the early 1970’s. In that time the way these services work together has improved so that you can find good models of coordinated activities in virtually every state.

Federal Human Service and Public Transportation Legislation and Programs

A 2003 study by the U.S. Government Accounting Office found that there were 62 programs that offered transportation to persons who were unable to use public transportation or to provide their own for Medicaid appointments, Head Start classes, job training, or other services. These persons are sometimes described as “transportation disadvantaged”, a term that may include persons with disabilities, older persons, or persons living in low-income households. Most of the programs are managed by the U.S. Department of Education (DOEd), Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS), Department of Labor (DOL), and Department of Transportation (DOT). These departments make funds available to states and others to provide transportation services. The majority of the programs are funded by the Department of Health and Human Services.

The major programs for persons with disabilities, including individuals with developmental disabilities, are shown in Table 1. Many of the services are designed to serve for certain age groups, persons with particular conditions, live in certain areas, or other situations. None of the services are directly provided by the federal government, but by the states or others. The state agency decides eligibility. Many services are also restricted to work or non-emergency medical transportation. (General trips are provided by public transportation organizations).

All urbanized areas are required to have a continuing, cooperative, and comprehensive planning process. The metropolitan planning organizations (MPOs) or transportation planning organizations (TPOs) are responsible for planning in urbanized areas. The State Department of Transportation provides planning services in rural areas.
